Fostering Community/Academia Partnerships in the US and Ireland – Lessons learned through the Community Engaged Scholars Programme

Date: Wednesday 16th October.

Time: 1-2pm

Venue: Zoom

Participants of this lunchtime seminar will hear stories from the Medical University of South Carolina's Clinical & Translational Research Institute and University of Galway on their collaboration and roll out of the Community Engaged Scholars Programme (CESP) in the US and Ireland. Participants will learn about the commonalities and differences between such initiatives in the US and Ireland, and the key factors and challenges in meaningful community/academic partnerships.

Registration

This online event is open to researchers, members of patient and community organisations, patients and members of the public.

Organisers:

The PPI Ignite Network @ University of Galway (<https://www.universityofgalway.ie/ppi/>) is a member of the national PPI Ignite Network, providing training and education in public and patient involvement (PPI) in research. PPI means that research is carried out with the people most likely to be impacted by the research results, rather than to, for or about these people. We work with a range of community and charity organisations, researchers, and health care professionals locally and within our university to build the capacity of stakeholders to work together in partnership to conduct impactful research.
