

Clare Mulvany & Orlagh O'Brien: Online Facilitation through Design Thinking (<https://www.activelink.ie/node/81104>)

Learn about Online Facilitation in this 5 week masterclass series using design thinking.

Skills for Facilitating Online: (Interactive live sessions via Zoom with tutors Clare Mulvany and Orlagh O'Brien – starts April 27th and runs Tuesday evenings).

Upskill your group facilitation skills to the online world whilst also learning design thinking and visual engagement.

Tuesday evenings, 2 hour workshops. Peer learning, reflection and project-based challenges.

Takes place

- 27th April, 7–9pm (Zoom)
- 4th May, 7–9pm (Zoom)
- 11th May, 7–9pm (Zoom)
- 18th May, no training
- 25th May, 7–9pm (Zoom)

Online gatherings that are engaging and productive lead to purposeful connection and inspired action.

This is a hands-on, practice-led course hosted by professional facilitators. You'll be introduced to methodologies, tools and techniques using a design thinking process. Applying these tools over the course of five weeks you'll plan, design, deliver and review your own online event.

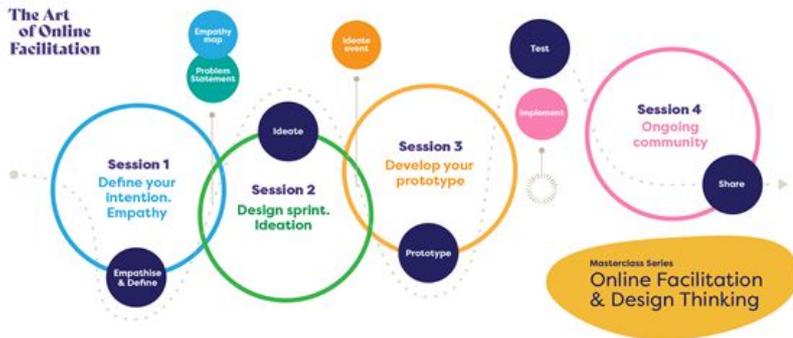

Through team learning and design sprints you will integrate the 5 core elements of the Art of Facilitation (Intention, People, Timings, Energy and Tools) as you respond to a creative event design challenge.

The course includes live demos of interactive collaborative tools which will save you time and provide skills to bring your events alive.

From the course you will come away with:

- A step-by-step design thinking process to scope out and design online events
- Tools and techniques to help you deliver your own events
- Practice implementing the framework and process
- A toolkit of resources for you to repeat this on an on-going basis
- A community of practice and support.
