

HAYS: Social Care Support Worker (Relief) - Kilkenny (<https://www.activelink.ie/node/85553>)

Social Care Support Worker Job | Relief Work | Kilkenny | €15ph

Your new company

Your new company is a leading health and social care provider across Ireland. They are renowned for their high-quality social care services including outreach and shared care as well as their home and community nursing services. They are committed to enhancing the quality of people's lives through the services they deliver. They are expanding their team to support the growing number of children and adults along with their families in homes and communities across the country

Your new role

In your new role as Support Worker, you will empower individuals with a disability to live meaningful lives in their communities through the provision of high quality and individualised support. You will support each service user with all aspects of daily living, physical assistance if required and ensure personal care is delivered. You will maintain a positive and trustworthy relationship with all service users along with family, friends and other service providers if relevant.

What you'll need to succeed.

To be successful as Support Worker you will hold a Level 6+ qualification in a relevant healthcare discipline, a current patient moving and handling certificate and current CPR certificate. In addition, you will have experience working in a residential setting and an understanding of the disability sector. With experience in a care environment for individuals with intellectual disabilities you will be a very strong candidate for this role.

What you'll get in return

As the new Support Worker you will receive regular working hours and have the opportunity to work as part of a motivated and supportive team. Reporting directly to the Service Manager, you will gain invaluable and transferable experience to assist you in your continuous professional development.
